Lo: to write a narrative

Once upon a time, there was a boy called Mini Moe. He had handsome black hair and mega blue eyes. At school his class were taunting and saying 'moe's a silly pig'. When moe got home at 3pm he ate some salt and vinegar crisps. Just then, a idea gently smook into his big, great head! When he went to bed he couldn't stop thinking about it! He thought he could make a animal translator! He loved his idea!

A few days later, Mini Moe went to the toilet so he didn't have to go in the middle of sketching a plan. He fetched some wires, speakers, levers and metal. He wrote where everything goes where because he really, really, really wanted his ^{great} invention to work. A few moments ~~or~~ later, he said "This is going to be ^{great}!" He said quietly. Everyone wondered where moe was and what he was doing. Obviously, he was ^{was} ~~was~~ charting a ~~000~~ large animal ^{translate} translator!

Mini Moe built his great invention in the garden. But his parents were totally confused. Moe said: "It's very unusual that nobody has ~~thought~~ thought of making this!" Everyone took a quick peek through their bright, blue window and looked at Moe.

Moe hoped that it would be as loud as a lion! Moe hated that everyone kept peeking through their bright, blue windows!

Moe said "I just hope they could ~~they~~ board up their bright, blue windows!" Just then, he finished his great invention! He was very, very, very proud!!
